DAMILANO

BAROLO

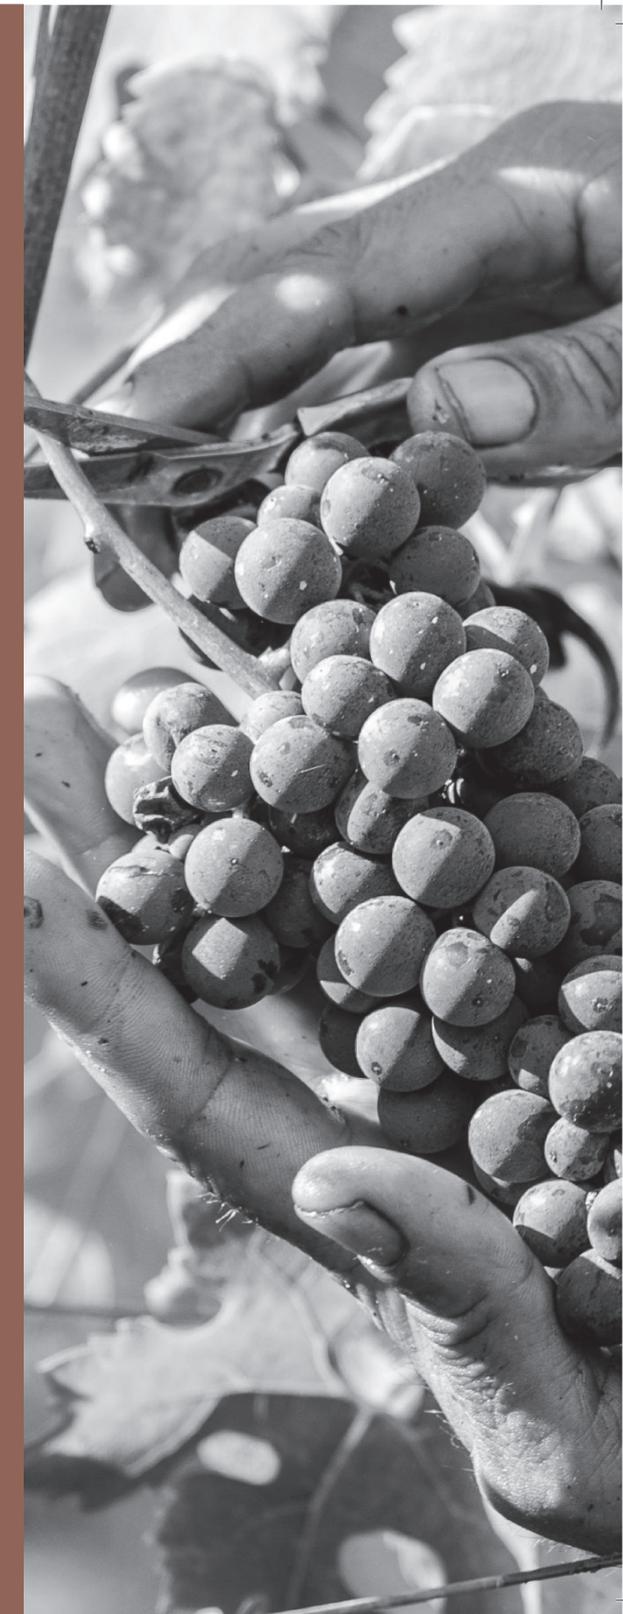

Damilano family has been active since 1890 when Giuseppe Borgogno, the great-grandfather of the current owners, started making wines from the family-owned vineyard in Barolo (Cuneo) a village located in the Langhe area that gives name to – the "king of wines" – Barolo.

It was with Giacomo Damilano, the founder's son-in-law, that the winery took on its current name. He worked with great care, dedication and passion, preserving the vines and applying constant innovation to the quality of the winemaking process.

Since 1997, the family business is managed by his three grandchildren: Guido, Mario, and Paolo.

The new generation nurtured the most important vine variety of the Langhe: Nebbiolo and some of the most important MGA, above them all: Cannubi. Damilano's two flagship wines: Barolo Docg Riserva Cannubi 1752 and Barolo Docg Cannubi, come from this famous hill, of which the family manages about 10 hectares (24.7 acres). The other MGA produced are Brunate, Cerequio, Liste and Raviole, which greatly differ in terms of organoleptic spectrum, each resulting from the respective soil's characteristics. Barolo Docg "Lecinquevigne" and Barolo Docg del comune di Serralunga d'Alba complete the Barolo selection.

Starting from harvest 2015, among the excellences of Damilano Winery there is "G.D.". Dedicated to the founder Giacomo Damilano, it is an interpreter of the Langhe elegance through the Chardonnay grape variety.
